What:

Seascape villa

Where:

Banks Peninsula, South Island, New Zealand

About:

Overlooking its own private bay, this sleek and secluded villa is one of four unique properties at Annandale, a 4,000-acre sheep and cattle farm about an hour's drive from Christchurch. With over 10 kilometres of rugged

Pacific coastline, you can watch rare Hector's dolphins frolic from the villa's outdoor Jacuzzi, or dive straight into kayaking, paddle-boarding, and sailing. Head up to the historic homestead for a farm-to-table cooking lesson from the award-winning chef, and then try your hand at a spot of cattle mustering. However you decide to spend your days, it's guaranteed you won't want to leave. Ever. annandale.com
